Introduction. In our country, which is on the path of building a legal, democratic and just civil society, the task of education is to educate a perfect person and mature personnel who have mature, free and independent thoughts in all respects.

The material and spiritual maturity of the society requires comprehensive and long-term preparation of young people to fulfill various social tasks, experiences of accumulated relationships, material and spiritual values.

It should be emphasized that it is the duty of parents to create a healthy environment in the family, to create opportunities and conditions for children to grow up. Parents should understand that they have a great responsibility and work in front of them.

Literature review and methods. Eastern peoples, for example, the Uzbek people, understand well the essence of a healthy lifestyle, deeply understand its meaning.

In fact, an important characteristic for the peoples of the East is to sympathize with each other, both on happy days and in difficult times. The basis of such unity and solidarity between people is formed in the family and neighborhood. In the family, it is considered an important criterion for the parents to be a personal example, model, example in the upbringing of their children. The behavior of parents in the family, the culture of behavior, and behavior play a key role in the formation of their children's spiritual education. Therefore, the parents themselves should follow the rules of oriental etiquette, have high respect for national and spiritual values, and have high universal human qualities. Children who have such positive qualities develop qualities such as patriotism, selflessness, loyalty, bravery, courage, endurance, self-control, dignity, and initiative.

If we approach the issue of education, in comparison to families with few children, children's education is much easier in families with many children. Because children in large families naturally see and observe the behavior of their parents, the care of their brothers and sisters, especially their friendly relations with each other, the diligent performance of various tasks at home, the politeness of the younger ones to the older ones. There is a desire to form such moral qualities in themselves. Therefore, in a family with several children, the care of parents acquires a special character. Such care will be shared equally.

If there are big and small children in the family, affection and friendship in various forms will be decided between them. Family life gives children the opportunity to develop their personality in human relationships. Compared to families with few children, there are such life tasks in families with many children, for example, love between older brothers and younger brothers, that is, different feelings, equal exchange of things between brothers and sisters, etc. [4]

A lot of time is spent on raising a child. But the only child born in the family grows up as a living toy of adults, a lover, the center of attention, joy and man of adults. His dissatisfaction with something and crying darkens the world of parents. They don't eat or drink themselves, they comb and dress their single children, and even organize various gifts. They don't even like to think that they are spoiling their child's future development. A child should not be taught from a young age to do what he wants, to wear what he wants or to bring him what he wants. It is necessary to constantly monitor his actions, to explain his wrong actions and the consequences of his mistakes. Paying serious attention to the child's manners, behavior, clothes, and interests is now a responsible task for parents.

Discussion and results. Human qualities, personal positive qualities, high spiritual and moral values, healthy beliefs, worldviews are formed in a person starting from childhood. At this point, it is very important to create a healthy spiritual environment in the family. The preservation of a healthy environment in the family depends on many factors, such as the good relationship between the heads of the family and the children, respect for the elders of the household, the mutual relations of the children in the family, their proper upbringing, the equal enthusiasm of the parents for the upbringing of their children, the correct order established in the family, the work of good parents, It is reflected in his correct attitude to the events and events of social life, and his free-thinking.

Eastern families have their own traditions and standards in child rearing, which have been passed down from century to century, from generation to generation. In the moral works of thinkers, raising children in the family is considered one of the priority tasks. Kaikovus dedicated the 5th chapter of his work «Nightmare» to the «Remembering to Know Parents» and the 27th chapter to «The Remembrance of Raising a Child» [3]. The main idea is to encourage young people to respect and honor their parents, to treat their neighbors with kindness and love, to be kind, and to learn a profession. To parents, «Consider teaching your child manners and skills as an inheritance. Fulfill the condition of fatherhood, so that your child lives as he was born, that is, every person is born, and from this day on, his character and nature accompany him. As he grows older, his body and soul gain strength, and his whole spirit (character) develops, and after reaching maturity, he manifests all his good and bad qualities. But you should pass on manners, skills and knowledge to your child, so that you will fulfill his right». The thinker expresses a very important point about knowing the rights of parents: «What you sow is what you reap» and believes that if the family's upbringing is built on the basis of this proverb, it will be done well. In any era, child education has gained special importance in the family and society.

In family education, there are methods such as the trust method, the model method, and the method of encouragement, which are organized based on the characteristics of children. Of course, the spiritual atmosphere in the family is also related to the reading of books, which has a special place in the development of the child's outlook, knowledge, and thinking. Therefore, every parent should instill in the child a love for books and stimulate his interest in this matter[7].

The ideological immunity of the young generation, which is brought up through educational tools such as protection of one's honor and pride, care, respect for adults and children, kindness, harmony and peace, will be strong.

As the President of the Republic of Uzbekistan, Sh. Mirziyoev, stated, «...the education of the young generation has always been important and relevant. But in the age we live in, this issue is truly becoming a matter of life and death. «The more perfect the education, the happier the people,» say the sages. In order for education to be perfect, it is absolutely impossible to allow a gap to appear in this matter»[1].

After all, it is impossible to educate the soul of one's country without cultivating love and respect for one's people, its traditions, language and spirituality. A perfect person always develops the perfection of his Motherland, considers it his duty to give his life for its development. Therefore, every family, educational institution and neighborhood, above all, it is the demand of the times to further increase the efficiency of measures and activities aimed at educating the young generation, who are the future of the country [8].

Based on the above considerations, the following tasks can be defined:

First, to create a healthy social and spiritual environment in the family;

Secondly, creating a family education program, taking into account today's requirements, in order to instill family values into the thinking of children;

Thirdly, to improve ideological and methodological support of young parents in raising their children;

Fourth, to summarize the national and universal achievements of family education;

Fifth, to establish a family library widely;

Sixth, to develop mechanisms to further strengthen close ties with the family+neighborhood+educational system;

Seventh, by developing the qualities of honesty and hard work, guide the youth to the profession;

Eighth, to inculcate in the child the idea of love for the Motherland in family education, to instill in him a sense of respect for the past of the nation and people, its values, spiritual and material heritage, to form feelings of national pride and patriotism;

Ninthly, the «Family Institute» will be established under the educational system and organize conversations, trainings, and seminars for parents related to the educational process.

Tenth, to promote educational instructions through popular pamphlets, booklets, popular scientific articles.

In short, it is natural for all of us to understand that if the family is healthy - the society is strong, if the society is strong - the country is stable.

Conclusion. Parents want their children to be polite, educated, spiritual, and perfect people, and they work for it. Therefore, every child should understand that he should make his parents' dreams come true. Parents live for their children, they work tirelessly to make them mature. Children should realize this and lead their lives, fulfill their duties, and strive to be righteous children who will bring thanks to their parents in the future.
